

Accountable Care Organizations (ACOs)

Is there a better way to control healthcare costs without limiting a patient's choice or lowering the quality of care? The development of accountable care organizations (ACOs) is being touted as the best hope for improving both patients' health outcomes and the efficient use of resources.

Nelson Hardiman attorney John Mills will be presenting at 8pm this evening. This presentation will explain how ACOs work, key distinctions between ACOs and HMOs, and will explore the evolving role and participation of physicians in the formation, structure and governance of ACOs. This presentation will also discuss key legal issues affecting physicians when they become part of an ACO network.
